

Anna Rathman

DOI: 10.21858/msr.21.04

Vol. no: 21

Return to issue

Return to editions list

French encyclopedists defined a museum as the sum of human knowledge and art, a place that can become both a theater and an auditorium. Professor Andrzej Kicinski wrote in his book on museums that both libraries and museums are a necessary and integral part of building identity, but also the landscape of the city. Recipients of spaces associated with museums are a social group that creates a new quality through a kind of initiation and sensitivity to contemporary social and artistic issues.

Anna Rathman, Pogranicze sztuki i architektury. Przestrzeń miejska jako ważny czynnik kształtowania tożsamości
Pobierz