

Contributions are invited to the scientific journal Mazovia. Regional Studies. We are currently accepting submissions for the issues to be published in 2017. Article proposals may be scientific or serve to inform about one's practical experience.

The journal is intended to serve as a platform enabling exchange of experience and facilitating cooperation within and between various specializations, in the fields of both theory and practice. The journal is published by the Mazovian Office of Regional Planning in Warsaw, a member of CrossRef – Publishers International Linking Association (PILA) which allows all the articles published in the journal to receive an individual DOI number. According to the current publishing plan, the next issues will focus on four subjects which are currently of importance in regional studies:

- urban renewal,
- landscape protection and planning,
- territorial cohesion,
- sustainable development.

Also welcome are contributions on other topics concerning public policy, spatial planning and practical aspects of local and regional governance.

Contributions to the next, twentieth issues of Mazovia. Regional Studies should be submitted by the end of November 2016. Contributions to further issues are welcome until a closing date is announced. Article proposals are accepted in Polish, English, German, Russian, French and Spanish.
