The author presents changes in the labor market of the Mazowieckie voivodeship in 1999-2008. The data are grouped in a much broader breakdown than before into about 250 items of the Polish activity classification. At the same time, he introduces new analytical snapshots, such as the share of employment in fields considered to be “carriers” of the knowledge-based economy, in information society services, in high-tech industries, in environmental protection and in fields that are most dynamic for the economy, as well as those considered non-developmental.
