

Agata Bronowska

DOI: lack

Vol no: 12

Return to issue

Return to editions list

The changing number of school-age children is forcing modern states to adapt the education system to the needs of the population. The state must offset the negative effects of the baby boomers, but it must also be prepared for the arrival of the demographic low. The challenges facing the education system in Poland for the coming decades are due, among other things, to the projected decline in the number of children and young people.

Agata Bronowska, Zmiany demograficzne i ich wpływ na edukację w województwie mazowieckim
Pobierz