

Adam Struzik

DOI: 10.21858/msr.26.06

Vol no: 26

Return to issue

Return to editions list

The article presents an overview of the Mazovian regional government's development policy during the two decades since the changes in the administrative division of Poland. The legislative context is presented, with particular focus on the acts which determined the role of regional governments in the implementation of development policy. Next, the horizontal and historical consistency of Mazovia's development policy is presented and set against the problems resulting from faulty redistribution mechanisms (the so-called "Robin-Hood tax").

Adam Struzik; Realizacja polityki rozwoju województwa mazowieckiego w latach 1998-2018Pobierz