

Mirosław Grochowski, Magdalena Fuhrmann, Tomasz Zegar

DOI: lack

Vol no: 5

Return to issue

Return to editions list

The issue of urban revitalization is becoming increasingly important in Poland. The reason for this is not only the degree of degradation of many cities or parts of them, which leads to a decline in their attractiveness or the appearance of problems of a social and economic nature. The growing importance of urban revitalization is also due to the fact that its positive effects can affect the situation not only of the local system, but also of supra-local systems, stimulating in them the desired phenomena and processes, important for development in a broader spatial perspective.

Mirośław Grochowski, Magdalena Fuhrmann, Tomasz Zegar, Rewitalizacja w Warszawie jako instrument zarządzania rozwojem miasta i regionu