The article analyzes selected elements of the economic attractiveness of the district cities of the Siedlce subregion, understood as the NUTS 3 Siedlce statistical subregion, located in the eastern part of the Mazovian Voivodeship. The analysis characterizes the most important determinants of the economic development of these cities, taking into account communication links and designated investment areas, as well as the most important aspects of economic activity in the cities in question, including the largest enterprises and major economic specializations.
