The article presents the evolution of spatial planning, related to the changes that took place in Poland 25 years ago, as a result of the change of the political system of the state and socio-economic transformations. This evolution consisted of three main phases: the initial phase, covering the years 1989-1994, the phase of full transformation, falling in the years 1995-2003, and the phase that continues to the present day - the phase that finalizes the transformation of spatial planning.
